Ad Hoc Executive

A modern management style is also expressed through office design.

A company's business culture is conveyed through its workstations and executive offices in particular. And within corporate cultures, the role of values such as transparency, teamwork and quality is becoming increasingly important. These values were the main focus when developing Ad Hoc Executive - the new furniture range by Antonio Citterio.

Functional elegance and high-quality materials.

The centrepiece of Ad Hoc Executive is a large table, which can serve as a workstation or be used for meetings. The adjustable and leather-covered desk blotter integrated into the fine wood veneered table top conceals the power and multimedia connections, and also serves as a useful storage space. Sideboards in three different sizes of anodised sheet aluminium, wood panels and leather covers (optional) provide space for documents and personal belongings.

The high sideboard has a special function: this version can additionally be used as a small standing desk.

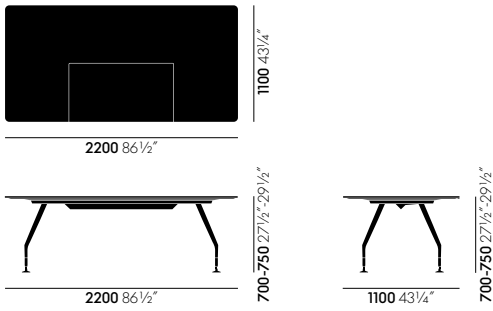

Ad Hoc Executive is made of high-quality materials such as aluminium, wood and Premium leather, and features excellent workmanship down to the last detail. Thanks to its light construction and elegant design, the range can be combined with the Ad Hoc furniture system, the AC 4 chair - also designed by Antonio Citterio - or with other classic pieces from the Vitra Collection.

Antonio Citterio

The architect and designer Antonio Citterio, who lives and works in Milan, has collaborated with Vitra since 1988. Together they have produced a series of office chairs and various office systems, as well as products for the Vitra Home Collection. The Citterio Collection is constantly being expanded.
